TEAM 1:

A manager of a team was aware that a lot had been asked of her team recently - with people working remotely and really pulling together to get some tough projects over the line. She decided that a fun way to motivate and reward her team was to send each a PuzzlePost, with a personalised message of thanks to each of them. The team really enjoyed the challenge, and felt it was more engaging than just a card!

TEAM 2:

A team, who were all working remotely, each had a PuzzlePost sent to their home address. They split into pairs on video-call and set about completing their challenge, all starting at an agreed time. Once they had unlocked the vault by completing the puzzles, the secret message was a link to a virtual happy hour!

TEAM 3:

A new team had their PuzzlePosts delivered to the office, where they split into teams of 3/4. Each team was handed a PuzzlePost by their Team Leader, and the race was on... each team had to complete the puzzles, with any clues used incurring time penalties, once completed, the secret message revealed a location. Prizes were awarded (including a wooden spoon!) to teams in order of arrival!
